

For Native American children living in poverty, opportunities are few and far between.

Native American students in South Dakota graduate high school in four years at a rate of 45%. Yet, students at St. Joseph's Indian School are pursuing their dreams and beating those odds. Students enrolled at St. Joseph's graduate at a rate of 96%.

St. Joseph's provides Native American children with the best chance to dream and succeed at becoming a nurse, honoring their culture, learning to play music, and so much more.

Air St. Joseph's new PSA today to show how St. Joseph's has Native American students saying, 'I Can Dream'.
