

American Heart Association.

For nearly 100 years, the American Heart Association has been committed to eliminating the No. 1 killer of all Americans. They fund research that leads to medical breakthroughs, train people in CPR and certify hospitals to provide the best care for people who've had a heart attack or stroke.

In the latest PSA from the American Heart Association, you will hear Jen's story. Jen was a new mom when she went into sudden heart failure and was told her only chance was a heart transplant. The American Heart Association helped make that possible, their work helped save Jen.

Today, Jen is a mother to two beautiful children. By airing this PSA, you can educate your community on the incredible work of the American Heart Association and help people like Jen continue to live a happy and healthy life.
