

In the latest PSA from the American Heart Association, you will hear Jeff's story. At 47, Jeff discovered he had a bad heart valve. It was one of the scariest days of his life. Thankfully, the research for Jeff's heart valve was funded by The American Heart Association. It saved his life.

Since Jeff received his heart valve, he watched his son get married, his daughter graduated high school and he welcomed a new grandson. Please share this message with your community to spread the lifesaving care and research the American Heart Association provides.

It could save a loved one in your life.
